Also you can use " Economical and convenient synthesis of fused bis(oxyiminobenzimidazole)s in a three-component reaction. A novel, simple, and efficient method for the synthesis of fused bis(oxyiminobenzimidazole)s has been developed. The strategy employs an unexpected three-component condensation between malononitrile, isatin, and piperazine catalyzed by 1,1'-(azodiazenyldiene)bis(cyclohexyl)zirconium dichloride, which led to the formation of a novel bis(pyrazoline)zirconium complex. Subsequent treatment of the obtained zirconium complex with 2,6-lutidine, benzimidazole, and dimethyl sulfate in ethanol afforded the desired fused bis(oxyiminobenzimidazole)s in good to excellent yields. The reaction proceeded under mild conditions, and could be performed with a large variety of isatins and benzylic amines. In Patent Document 1, there is proposed a thermoelectric conversion module in which a plurality of thermoelectric conversion elements are connected in series. The thermoelectric conversion element disclosed in Patent Document 1 is an invention that employs a PbTe—SiGe or Nb—SiGe thermoelectric material that exhibits a high thermoelectric conversion efficiency.
