Here are five tweaks you can add to your Gmail to make it more user friendly. Unread Count What it does: If you don't know why you're reading this email and other unread emails remain hidden from sight, your Gmail becomes a cluttered mess. The Unread Count will change the number of unread emails to a different color, so it's easier to spot what to read next. It's a pretty subtle tweak, but it's something you can easily add to any Gmail account. The Final Countdown What it does: Sometimes, a quick click of a link can take you to a website where you have to leave your email address for a survey. The Final Countdown will make that less of a hassle. Once you've downloaded the Quick Unsubscribe app to your phone, just tap on a link in an email and it'll take you to your account, where you can easily unsubscribe. If you want, you can also use the app to send emails directly from your phone if you're interested in quickly checking into something. Rich Media Images What it does: Of course, you want to be able to save, share, and print emails, but Gmail natively supports a wide variety of formats, including PowerPoint, PDF, and even archive-ready formats. If you want to add images to an email, but don't want to invest time uploading or converting them, you can get into them right in Gmail. First, click on the "More" link in the top right of the Gmail window. Then choose "Open by Mail Viewer." Finally, drag your file right on top of the email. Reliable Contact Search
