Loomis died at his home in Newport, Washington, on Saturday, according to a family statement. He has been an adviser to President George H.W. Bush, a former director of the Central Intelligence Agency and the author of several books, including "Gardens of A Thousand Ghosts," a memoir of his time in the Middle East. In 2014, Loomis' son, Ben, died in the line of duty while trying to save a man from a burning apartment building. Loomis met his wife, Pamela Foster, in Germany in 1970. The couple married in 1971 and had three sons. Loomis was sworn in as deputy chief of staff for operations of the CIA in August 1978. He was a 1981 recipient of the CIA's Distinguished Intelligence Medal. Loomis also was awarded the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star, the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal and the Army Commendation Medal. He retired from the Army in 1983 and was a senior adviser to the Defense and the state department for the U.S. government for the arms control negotiations with the Soviet Union that culminated in the 1993 treaty banning land-based medium-range missiles. Loomis was on leave from his government service in the spring of 1990 when his youngest son died in a drunk driving accident, according to his website. He then devoted himself to the agency until he retired as chief of staff in 1998. While it's unclear what motivated Loomis to aid in negotiating the treaty that saw the destruction of some of the world
