Graduate students of the Human Movement Sciences department (HMS) at the Complutense University of Madrid are creating an online platform to accompany children and adults with Duchenne muscular dystrophy. 'El último movimiento' (The last movement) is an initiative run by the team led by Patricia Akester, coordinator and Juan Diego Darío, researcher. The initiative is supported by the Spanish Association for Duchenne patients. It aims to fill the gap that exists for the parents of children and adults with Duchenne, because of the lack of specialized centers to provide them, with instruments that can be used at home. This means that in their own home, and without having any specialized experience, a parent of a child or adult with Duchenne muscular dystrophy can access specially designed training equipment, which consists of a compact recording instrument that informs the user about the results of the training; a module that is equipped with elements to observe the user and send the data to a website; and a specialised software that will be updated by the research team. 'El último movimiento' for people with Duchenne 'El último movimiento' for people with Duchenne is a non-profit initiative started by the Human Movement Sciences department (HMS) at Complutense University of Madrid. It offers a solution that allows parents of patients with Duchenne to follow and observe their children and adults with the disease. Parents or relatives of people with Duchenne can use the platform from anywhere in the world, in the comfort of their own homes, to get guidance and support in their daily lives. Alberto, a patient, explains that he wishes to be able to exercise at home.
